Part-funded by the Scottish Government as part of its Public Good Veterinary Advice Services

Skin diseases

A group of imported in-calf fleckvieh heifers were added to a 190 suckler cow herd in February. One aborted at grass in July at around seven months gestation. The foetus showed evidence of marked alopecia with the exception of the distal limbs and tail (Fig 3), and

Part-funded by the Scottish Government as part of its Public Good Veterinary Advice Services